Euro-Mediterranean Entanglements in Medieval History
Online seminars organised by the German Historical Institutes of Paris and Rome

Organisers: German Historical Institute of Paris/German Historical Institute of Rome
Location: Online Zoom
Date: Academic year 2024/2025
Language: English
Coordinators: Dr. Amélie Sagasser (DHI Paris), Dr. Kordula Wolf (DHI Rome)

The German Historical Institutes of Paris and Rome are hosting the online seminar series on "Euro-Mediterranean Entanglements in Medieval History". Its aim is to exchange new ideas and perspectives with young and established scholars from all medieval disciplines. Sessions will take place every two months and are intended to provide an international and interdisciplinary forum where different topics and methodological approaches can be presented and discussed. Our speakers begin with a 10-minute keynote to present their current or recently completed research, followed by a 10-minute commentary from an invited expert. This will be the basis for the subsequent 40-minute discussion with the online audience.

Topics
The geographical area is deliberately not clearly defined and includes Europe, as well as the Mediterranean region in its broadest sense. Interconnections between the Euro-Mediterranean area and other world regions are also included. The following topics are in focus:

- cross-regional, transcultural, and interreligious entanglements (processes/results).
- overlapping spaces: between geographic borders and cultural contacts
- social networks and interpersonal relations
- mobility and migration
- transfer, diffusion and adaptation (of ideas, knowledge and material objects)
